

Sealed Air Commits Support to New Water Stewardship Standard and Program

April 9, 2014

ELMWOOD PARK, N.J.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Apr. 9, 2014-- Sealed Air (NYSE: SEE) announced today it has become a Founding Partner of the AWS International Water Stewardship Program. The Program was launched this week by the Alliance for Water Stewardship and is the first global framework designed to provide global standards for large-scale water use organizations to manage and report on water use and address clean water risks and impacts.

The AWS Standard is the centerpiece of the new AWS Program, which includes multi-stakeholder membership, assurance and training. The aim is to directly provide, or facilitate access to, the range of services that both public and private sector water users need to achieve their facility and watershed level targets.

"Sealed Air has been instrumental in developing the underlying AWS Standard since 2009 through sponsorship and support in reviewing and testing the Standard," said Ron Cotterman, Vice President, Sealed Air. "As a Founding Partner of the newly launched AWS Program, we will share our extensive expertise in helping customers meet their water sustainability targets to progress the adoption of AWS globally."

Sealed Air is a leading innovator in developing water stewardship solutions across a range of hospitality, building care, retail and food & beverage industries. These solutions include products for reducing water use, tools for assessing comparative water consumption, and services to identify and address water-related risks and impacts.

"The launch of the AWS Standard is a pivotal moment in our collective efforts to manage water wisely in a world where social, economic and environmental pressures collide. By providing a global framework to develop local solutions, AWS will be a driving force for collaboration on water sustainability. We are delighted to have Sealed Air as a Founding Partner and we look forward to further strengthening our relationship in the future," said Adrian Sym, AWS Executive Director.
